4. Rock Head

In the second room of "You Can't Sleep On A Door," Brian Bress' current Cherry and Martin exhibition, there's a tall, stand-alone rectangle of rich walnut. It has a triangle cut in the middle through which a high definition video plays. The video shows a child-sized figure with an orange and red agate for a face swinging back and forth rhythmically in a gray sling. Called Pendulum, the sculpture is awkward and elegant in the best way.
